INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS LECTURE SERIES

AAUW joins with the Ethical Society's Tuesday Women's Association to present four stimulating lectures featuring topics concerning international relations. The lectures are presented at the Ethical Society, 9001 Clayton Road, 63117, on the 2nd Tuesday of January, February, March, and April from 10:45-11:45 AM in the upper auditorium. There is no fee, but contributions are greatly appreciated. Those who wish may bring a brown-bag lunch and eat with the speaker and others in attendance after the lecture. Park in the back and enter from either door (lower level) and take the elevator. In case of inclement weather, you may call 314-991-0955, ext. 224. The topics for 2016 are as follows:

Mar 8 - Microeconomics: How Incentives Drive Our Behavior – Speaker: John Horn, senior lecturer in economics, Olin Business School, Washington University of St. Louis. Microeconomics is the study of how individuals – consumers, companies, government agencies, workers, mangers – make decisions. Collectively, these millions of decisions lead to the outcomes we observe in the economy. By understanding why individuals behave the way they do, economics can help us think about what would change if we changed the laws or policies or norms that govern how we interact. This session will give an overview of microeconomic principles and allow for the opportunity to discuss how this can be used to explain specific outcomes in the economy. Coordinator: Connie Gray Assistant coordinator: Charleen Walsh

Apr 12 – A Global Perspective on Addressing Gun Violence – Speaker: Ryan D. Kulik, BA, MA, Political Science, BFA Theater Arts, managing partner RD Kulik and Associates, head editor for SeedSing.com. Ryan D. Kulik has spent over 20 years working as a lobbyist, public relations consultant, and policy advisor in regards to gun violence prevention. He specializes in taking controversial issues and creating new partnerships with the goal of implementing positive social change. Through SeedSing.com, Mr. Kulik has created a community of independent journalists who, without influence or bias, spotlight the politics and popular culture of the day. The United States has recently seen a spate of high profile shootings. With an eye toward this violence, Mr. Kulik is going to delve into the issue of how gun laws affect the overall well-being of our global society. Do other industrialized nations have the same public health crisis that the United States is experiencing? How have developing nations dealt with the culture of gun ownership, and what role does this play in their society's rates of violence and injury? The multi-media presentation will try to shed light on the question "Do guns make more, or less, Safe?" Coordinator: Usha Sathe Assistant coordinator: Nancy Hutchins

Missouri Women's Network

LEGISLATIVE RETREAT

JANUARY 16, 2016

Representatives from women's organizations across Missouri convened in Columbia January 16, 2016, for the Annual Women's Legislative Retreat.

They heard legislators talk about the expected action this year in Jefferson City and experts' analysis of proposed rightto-work legislation, photo identification for voting, and Medicaid expansion efforts. Participants then determined the priorities for women's issues for the session.

Representative Stephen Webber was the keynote speaker for the event. He gave a detailed presentation of how the Missouri House works, including the various ways a bill can become law and the negotiations that entails. As many as eight different individuals have a part in getting a bill to its final stage.

Several candidates for public office made appearances including Bill Otto (candidate for US House of Representatives, District 4), Martha Stevens (candidate for Missouri House, District 46), and Brianna Lennon (candidate for Boone County Commissioner).

Attendees had an opportunity to discuss the pre-filed bills (there are over 1,000). Priorities adopted were the following: Tier 1, Reproductive Rights, ERA; Tier 2, Voting Rights, Medicaid Expansion, Pay Equity, Violence Against Women; Tier 3, Labor Issues (Minimum Wage, Right-to-Work), Social Justice. Gun Issues and Education also received a number of votes.

Organizational representatives in attendance included those from AAUW, NOW, League of Women Voters, MWLC, WILPF, MO Women's Political Caucus, NCJW, MWN, NEA, and others. The women's organizations had an opportunity to discuss with the group their current legislative focus and their next action or activity.

NATIONAL NEWS

AAUW LEGAL ADVOCACY FUND

Meet Aileen Rizo, Our Newest LAF-Supported Plaintiff. Pay equity is a matter of simple fairness. Yet in 2014, women working full time in the United States typically were paid just 79 cents for every dollar paid to men. Aileen Rizo's case, Rizo v. Fresno County Office of Education, highlights a significant factor that can contribute to the wage gap: employers' reliance on an employee's prior salary history to determine a new salary. AAUW is proud to support the case through our Legal Advocacy Fund. Read more about Rizo's case.

LAF-Supported Plaintiffs Win Settlement. In January 2016, the plaintiffs in the LAF-supported case Moshak v. University of Tennessee successfully settled their Title IX lawsuit against the university. As part of the settlement, the university will pay more than $1 million.

Jennifer Moshak, Heather Mason, and Collin Schlosser are former employees of the University of Tennessee's women's athletic department. In 2012, they filed suit against the university, alleging sex discrimination and unlawful retaliation under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, and the Equal Pay Act of 1963. The plaintiffs claim they were unlawfully discriminated against and eventually forced out of their positions during a university-led merger of the men's and women's athletic departments.

Gender discrimination in sports remains a significant problem, for athletes as well as for coaches and administrators who support women's athletics. The Moshak plaintiffs shared a professional commitment to women's athletics at a university that has a rich history of excellence in women's sports. Their allegations show just how pervasive discrimination against women's sports and women athletes can be.

AAUW is thrilled for the plaintiffs and proud to have supported the case.

Comment on AAUW Facebook Page:

Marti J. Sladek, attorney and AAUW volunteer, wrote: "AAUW should be taking a teensy little bit of credit for developments in connection with Cuba. Our trip there four years ago was the first public policy group allowed to go. We met with policy makers that other humanitarian, etc. groups did not meet, like Mariela Castro. (They urged us to fight for the ERA!) Many of us joined the campaign to lift the embargo based on our experiences there. Reps from AAUW went to the White House for a briefing after the trip, and we published and spoke. I like to think we had some influence, however small and cumulative, on events. I am thrilled."

WASHINGTON UPDATE

Firsts

• First American woman captains cruise ship. Kate McCue became the first American woman to captain a mega-ship this year. Celebrity Cruises announced that McCue would lead a 14-day cruise with more than 2,100 passengers and a crew of 950.

• First Supercar with Female Design Lead to Premier in November. The Acura NSX is the first supercar with a female design lead. Michelle Christensen is the first female exterior designer at Acura, and led the styling efforts on the NSX. The new all-wheel-drive hybrid car will debut at the Detroit auto show this month.

• Firsts in Sports.

• Sarah Thomas became the first female full-time referee in the NFL. She was also the first female referee in a major college football game.

 $\circ~$ Jen Welter became the first woman to coach in the NFL when the Arizona Cardinals added her to their coaching staff.

• Major League Baseball saw its first female coach this year, as the Oakland Athletics hired Justine Siegal. She is also the first woman to pitch at batting practice for a major league team.

• Firsts in the Media & Arts.

• Misty Copeland made history this year by becoming the first African-American female principal dancer with the American Ballet Theater.

• The Economist named Zanny Minton Beddoes as editor-in-chief. This is the first time a woman has held the top editor position in the magazine's 172-year history.

• Lisa Kron and Jeanine Tesori won the Tony Award for Best Original Score. They are the first female writing team to win the award.

Firsts in the Military

• Kristen Griest and Shaye Haver were the first female soldiers to graduate from the U.S. Army Ranger School. They were the only women in their 96-person graduating class. Just days after this achievement, the Navy Seals announced a plan to allow women into their teams.

• Vice Admiral Nora Tyson was nominated by the president to lead the U.S. Third Fleet, making her the first female commander of a Navy fleet.

• Air Force Lt. Col. Christine Mau was the first woman to fly an F-35 Lighting II jet. She is the deputy commander of the 33rd Fighter Wing Operations group.

 $\circ~$ Capt. Katie Higgins became the first woman to fly with the Blue Angels, an elite group of pilots that performs aerobatics.

State Spotlight

AAUW of Kansas President Dr. Nancy Bolsen was asked for ideas by the Wichita Eagle to address the gender pay gap. Statistics from the U.S. Census Bureau found that pay disparities between men and women are higher in Sedgwick County than the rest of Kansas. Bolson suggested that the first step is to understand why the pay gap is so much larger in Sedgwick County and also highlighted the importance of salary negotiation skills for women.

AAUW Oregon delivers Title IX resources to 98 percent of the state's school districts: Members of AAUW of Oregon have delivered the U.S Department of Education's new Title IX coordinator resources to over 199 school districts in the state, with more expected in coming weeks. AAUW advocates have been braving winter weather to distribute these guidelines across the state to ensure that Title IX coordinators are better able to make our schools safe and equitable for all. Cheers to Oregon AAUW!

Will Boston Be the First City to Close the Pay Gap? In October, the mayor, the city's Office of Women's Advancement, and AAUW leaders announced an ambitious initiative to offer free AAUW Work Smart salary negotiation trainings to half of Boston's working women in the next five years. That means training 85,000 women to negotiate higher salaries and better benefits — and making a dent in the gender pay gap, which stands nationally at 21 percent. Women working full time in the United States typically are paid just 79% of what men are paid, and it's even worse for most women of color. The gender pay gap starts just one year out of college, and it only widens over the course of a career.

GAO Report Finds Gender Disparity in STEM Funding

A report released by the Government Accountability Office found that some federal agencies are not following Title IX or addressing gender bias in federal research projects in STEM fields. Rep. Louise Slaughter (D-NY) requested the report in 2013 to make sure that the $25 billion in STEM grants funded women as well as men. The congresswoman called on the six federal agencies that award over 90 percent of the funds to quickly address the failings in their departments, conduct required Title IX compliance reviews, and improve data collection. More from AAUW on this great development in 2016!

Education Department's Title IX Sexual Violence Cases

Approaches 200. The U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) is now investigating 199 Title IX sexual violence cases. These cases span across the country at 161 colleges. Just three weeks into the new year, OCR has opened a new case at the University of California-San Francisco, the campus' second investigation of its kind. In January 2014 President Barack Obama established a White House task force to address campus sexual assault. One of the group's key recommendations is for schools to implement climate surveys to measure the number of campus sexual assault, the services used, the impact of prevention programs, and so on. The Bureau of Justice Statistics has pilot tested the climate survey at nine colleges and universities, which revealed that an average of 21 percent of female undergraduate students experienced a sexual assault since attending college. This figure is consistent with the widely reported statistic that one in five women is sexually assaulted during college.

Cheers and Jeers

AAUW Cheer: Defense Secretary Ashton Carter announced that no job in the United States military will be denied based on gender, opening the door for women to hold combat jobs. This decision will open up about 220,000 jobs when implemented.

AAUW Jeer: The United States fell to 28th on the global gender equality list. According to the yearly report from the World Economic Forum, the United States fell eight places from 2014, falling behind such countries as Rwanda, Bolivia, Slovenia, and Iceland.

AAUW Cheer: The market index provider MSCI studied public companies worldwide and found boardrooms that had strong female leadership returned a 36 percent greater return since 2009. The female-led companies also outpaced male-dominated ones, with a 10 percent return versus 7 percent return, respectively. Unfortunately, the same study predicts that the global percentage of female board directors will not reach 30 percent until 2027.

AAUW Jeer: The National Bureau of Economic Research found that fathers in California are twice as likely to take paternity leave for newborn sons as for daughters. The study also found this gender gap was more significant when fathers of newborn daughters were married to mothers who are employed; such men are unlikely to take paid family leave.

Bits and Pieces

• Low-income mothers continue to struggle for survival as several states have imposed bigger obstacles to receiving assistance. Studies show that social networking has become more important than ever for women who are unable to make ends meet with dead-end, low paying jobs.

• Research from the Proceedings of National Academy of Sciences discovered that there is no difference between men's and women's brains. These findings show that different capabilities or career choices are not based on biological differences but rather cultural expectations and gender role socialization.

• The U.S. women's national soccer team canceled a match in Honolulu, Hawaii due to poor field conditions that threatened the safety of the players. During their World Cup Victory Tour, the women's team played eight out of nine games on artificial fields while the men's team have not played a single game on artificial turf all year.

• Out of 15 block grant program choices, a bullying performance measure program was chosen by 17 states and jurisdictions. These states and jurisdictions will use the funds to examine the percentage of youth who are bullied and use the data as a key indicator of health and wellness.

• Emma Watson revealed that she fought back against those that did not want her to use the word "feminism" in her United Nation's HeforShe speech last year. Watson was told that the word "feminist" was too alienating for some people. The former Harry Potter star disagreed, and used the word "feminism" three times and "feminist" a total of four times, stating that feminism should be inclusive for all genders.

The United Nations send three foreign women to the U.S. to assess gender equality. Apparently, they were less than pleased with the results. A letter from a UN Working Group addressed the issue of discrimination against women in the United States. The group recommended closing the 21 percent gender pay gap by providing a livable minimum wage and guaranteeing paid parental leave.

• The Women's Media Center released a report that found media coverage of campus rape is skewed toward the bylines of men. Fifty-five percent of sexual assault stories were written by men while women account for only 31 percent.

• The U.S Department of Justice settled a sex discrimination lawsuit against the Chicago Board of Education, who allegedly terminated teachers because of their pregnancies. The settlement includes changes in policies, training requirements, and back pay for the terminated pregnant employees.

• NASA's new class of astronauts is 50 percent female for the first time in its history. Within the class, three of the four women are married and two are mothers. The class will be eligible for an inaugural trip to Mars in 15 years.

• The U.S. Department of Education announced that the list of religious schools that receive federal exemptions to discriminate against LGBT students will be posted online for the public to view. This decision comes after eight senators requested more transparency in the practice of granting Title IX waivers to religious schools that receive federal money.

• A viral video released by the Thames Valley police force in the United Kingdom raises awareness for sexual consent in true British fashion by comparing consent to making tea. It's a must watch!

 During the federal government closure in the aftermath of winter storm Jonas, the United States Senate was briefly run by all female senators and an all-female staff; from Senator Lisa Murkowski (R-AK) and Senator Susan Collins (R-ME), to the floor manager, down to the Senate pages. (What happened to the men?)

• The United Nations announced the first High-Level Panel on Women's Economic Empowerment. The panel will give recommendations for the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development to improve economic outcomes for women globally and improve women's leadership in sustainable economic growth.

"A strong woman understands that the gifts such as logic, decisiveness, and strength are just as feminine as intuition and emotional connection. She values and uses all of her gifts."—Nancy Rathburn
